Leda

Faced with a simple truth:
You either lurch into the sea, naked as any plucked and pimpled swan or else you stand and cringe uncouth, maintain that sad position on the shore;
I leapt and found the water strangely warm soft as the feathers of some youthful bird and joy enough to float.

Catherine Cole