Halimah Mohamed Ali is a senior lecturer at Universiti Sains Malaysia. She teaches Cross Cultural South East Asian Literature, Publishing and the Popular Novel and American and European Literature. Her current publication is an edited collection of essays comprising her work and her colleagues’ titled Sastera Melalui Budaya dan Media (Literature Through Culture and Media) (2013), which is in the Malay language. She has also written on Indian-English literature and has published a book titled Orientalism from Within: Arundhati Roy and Her Contemporaries (2011). Currently she is spending her sabbatical and doing research in University of Wollongong, Sydney, New South Wales, Australia.

Ali Alizadeh’s latest book is Transactions (UQP, 2013; reviewed this issue). He is a lecturer in Creative Writing and Literary Studies at Monash University.

Rosslyn Almond is currently undertaking a PhD in Literature at ACU in Melbourne, where she is also employed as a sessional tutor. Her research addresses constructions of gender and sexuality in contemporary Australian fiction.

Shari Argent completed an Honours Degree in Arts (Creative Writing) at Flinders University in 2013. Her thesis focused on Jules Verne and the possibilities of modern adaptations.

Filipa Bellette lives in Tasmania and teaches online Creative Writing for Macquarie University. In 2012, she completed her Creative Writing PhD on the ethics of cross-cultural/racial writing. She has had a selection of poetry, short fiction and a scholarly article published in literary journals, including Blue Dog: Australian Poetry, The Quarry and TEXT. She won the 2014 Right Now Poetry and Fiction Competition for the fiction category.

Ken Bolton is a poet and art critic who works in Adelaide at the Australian Experimental Art Foundation, runs the Lee Marvin Readings and sometimes publishes Little Esther books. Shearsman (UK) published his Selected Poems in 2012.

Mary Byrne is an Irish writer of short fiction living in France. Her prizewinning chapbook A Parallel Life is forthcoming from Kore Press. She is currently working on several short fiction collections.

Violet Cho is a Burmese Karen translator and writer living in exile. From the Karen ethnic minority, she grew up in refugee camps on the Thai-Myanmar border, where she began working in English, Karen and Burmese language radio, print and online media. Violet is currently a Visiting Fellow in the College of Asia and the Pacific, Australian National University. She is the co-editor and translator of a recent anthology of Burmese poetry in translation, Poems of Mya Kabyar, Tin Nwan Lwin & Khaing Mar Kyaw Zaw, published by Vagabond Press.

Born in the rain-soaked Pacific Northwest, U.S.A., Alex Cothren is presently drying himself out in sunny Adelaide. He studies creative writing at Flinders University, and is the recent recipient of the Carmel Bird Short Fiction Award.
Joost Daalder is a Professor of English at Flinders University, and has extensively published within the area of English Renaissance Literature, not least on plays dealing with ‘abnormal psychology’, such as The Changeling. His voluminous edition of the two parts of The Honest Whore is in the process of being published in the Digital Renaissance Editions series.

Dan Disney’s most recent collection of poems, Mannequin’s Guide to Utopias, is published with ASM (Macao), and he is editor of the forthcoming Exploring Second Language Creative Writing: Beyond Babel (John Benjamins). He currently teaches in the English Literature Program at Sogang University (Seoul).

Gillian Dooley is general editor of Transnational Literature.

Lauren Dougherty completed her Honours degree in English Literature in 2013, and is now working as an editor and writer for the Australia Times.

Sarah Dowling is a PhD candidate (Literature) and sessional academic at Australian Catholic University, Melbourne. Her research interests include depictions of spirituality, ineffability, and challenges to expectations of narrativity, wholeness or ‘closure’ in poetry. Her soon-to-be-completed thesis, “‘The Imaging of the Invisible’: Narrative, Pilgrimage and the “Metaphysics of the Quotidian” in Charles Wright’s Poetry’, presents a comprehensive retrospective of contemporary US poet Charles Wright’s oeuvre, illuminating his ongoing engagement with the ‘invisible’ ‘other’ that underlies and determines the visible world.

Steve Evans teaches at Flinders University, South Australia, where he is Head of the Department of English, Creative Writing & Australian Studies. Steve has published 11 books, and has won various poetry prizes. He is a reviewer, literary editor for an international journal, and has been on the organising committee for six literary festivals.

Alison Flett was born and bred in Edinburgh, Scotland but moved to Adelaide in 2010. Her poetry often explores connection to place and the effects of displacement on the human psyche.

Robyn Greaves is a PhD candidate in English at the University of Tasmania. Her research interests are Australian fiction, representations of culture and identity; life writing; travel writing; narrative, memory and place.

Kay Hart is a freelance writer based in Melbourne. She is currently working on a series of short stories as well as a chapter book for early readers. Kay was a member of the Short Fiction Viewing Panel of the Melbourne International Film Festival 2013. Her blog Talewags is a creative journal of jottings, thoughts and photography.

Libby Hart is the author of Fresh News from the Arctic (Anne Elder Award) and This Floating World (shortlisted for the Victorian Premier’s Awards and the Age Book of the Year Awards). A new poetry collection, Wild, is forthcoming from Pitt Street Poetry in 2014.

Kate Hayford is a freelance writer and editor, currently undertaking a PhD in Creative Writing at Flinders University, where she also teaches English part-time. Her fiction has been published... by Seaview Press and most recently in Transnational Literature. Her writing and research interests include historical fiction, Hebridean mythology, and the St Kilda Islands.

Kathryn Hummel writes non-fiction, fiction and poetry, often combined with her photography in digital performance. Her diverse work has been published throughout Australia, New Zealand, the US, and Eastern, Western and Southern Asia. A collection of her poetry will be published by the Walleah Press in 2014.

Wei H. Kao lectures at National Taiwan University. He is the author of The Formation of an Irish Literary Canon in the Mid-twentieth Century (2007). He is working on the representations of migration and globalization in contemporary Irish drama.

Muneer Aram Kuzhiyan (A. K. Muneer Hudawi) is currently a 2013-14 Fulbright-Nehru Doctoral Research Fellow at the University of California at Berkeley. He is a PhD candidate in the Department of English Literature at the English and Foreign Languages University, Hyderabad, India. His research interests include devotion and narratives in South Indian Islam, embodiment and subject-formation, contemporary discourse on Islam, cultural theory, and minority discourse.

Reshmi Lahiri-Roy holds a PhD in English and Cultural Studies and an MA in Gender Studies from University of Canterbury, New Zealand. Her research interests include Postcolonial Studies, Cultural Studies, Cross-cultural management, Bollywood and Diasporic Cinema, Migrant and Gender issues. She has designed and taught courses dealing with Postcolonial Studies, Socio-cultural issues in post-independence India, Ethnic minorities in India, Indian Travel Writing, Women’s issues in India, Questions of Identity amongst the Indian Diaspora as well as courses on Indian ‘Parallel’ cinema and is currently working as a research associate at Monash University and Deakin University.

Gay Lynch teaches creative writing and English at Flinders University. She has published Apocryphal and Literary Influences on Galway Diasporic History (2010), Cleanskin (2006), an adult psycho-fem-thriller, short stories, educational children’s texts and academic papers, and is presently working on a resubmit of her historical novel to a publisher. Most recently, she published ‘Pumped’ in Sleepers Almanac: No 8 (2013).

Keith Mac Nider hails from Hong Kong and has a PhD in History. He is currently working on a doctorate in creative writing at CQU. He lives with his wife at Victor Harbor and experiences writing as deeply healing.

Kent MacCarter is a writer and editor in Castlemaine, with his wife and son. He’s the author of three poetry collections – In the Hungry Middle of Here (Transit Lounge, 2009), Ribosome Spreadsheet (Picaro, 2011) and Sputnik’s Cousin (Transit Lounge, 2014).

Jennifer A. Marquardt received her PhD in English from the Center for Writers at The University of Southern Mississippi and lives in Wenzhou, China where she is Assistant Professor of English at Kean University – Wenzhou. She likes red shoes.
Russell McDougall is Professor of English at the University of New England, Armidale, Australia. He has published extensively on Australian, Caribbean and African literatures and is Executive Editor of Rodopi’s Postcolonial Lives series (commencing 2015). His most recent book publications are The Roth Family, Anthropology and Colonial Administration (ed. with Iain Davidson, 2009), and Writing, Travel, Empire. Colonial Narratives of Other Cultures (ed. with Peter Hulme, 2007).

Maja Milatovic is a final year PhD candidate in English Literature at the University of Edinburgh, researching the ancestor figure in African American women writers’ neo-slave narratives. In addition to African American literature, Maja’s research interests include Indigenous studies, digital humanities and education and more broadly, critical race and whiteness studies, postcolonial, feminist and trauma theory.

Nina Muždeka is an Assistant Professor at the English Department of the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Novi Sad, Serbia, where she teaches courses on Anglophone literatures and cultures. She has published the monograph on the issue of genre in the novels of Julian Barnes and is currently preparing a monograph on magical realism in the novels of Angela Carter.

Satendra Nandan is a former MP and cabinet minister in the Bavadra Government in Fiji and a member of the Fiji Constitution Commission, 2012. An award-winning writer and academic, he is currently Emeritus Professor at the Donald Horne Institute of Creative and Cultural Research at the University of Canberra.

Aloka Patel teaches in the Department of English, Sambalpur University, Odisha, India. She has worked on Jamaica Kincaid and is interested in women writers in a variety of contexts. At present she is working on representation of mythical women in Indian writings.

Eleni Pavlides is a University Associate at the University of Tasmania. She is a playwright, performer and literary critic who studied with the Western Australian Academy of Performing Arts (WAAPA). Eleni was awarded her PhD from the University of Western Australia in 2011 and her book Un-Australian Fictions: Nation, Multiculture(alism) and Globalisation 1988-2008 was published in 2013.

V. Prem Lata is Associate Professor at the Department of English Studies, Dayalbagh Educational Institute (Deemed University), Agra, India. Her research interests include literary theory, consciousness studies, Systems Science and humanities among others. She is currently working on synesthesia, literature and consciousness.

Nishi Pulugurtha teaches in the English at Brahmananda Keshab Chandra College, Kolkata. Her areas of interest are British Romantic literature, Indian Writing in English, Postcolonial Literature, the Diaspora and film and lectured and published in these areas.

Kevin Roberts was born and raised in Adelaide. He currently lives on Vancouver Island. He is a poet, playwright, and fiction writer. He has published work mainly in Canada and Australia His latest book of poetry is Writing the Tides. His novels include Tears in a Glass Eye, She’ll be Caitlin Roper is a recent admission into the Research Higher Degree of Doctor of Philosophy and a graduate of Flinders University. In 2013 she completed her Honours thesis entitled ‘The Heart of the Mountain: The Use of Intertextuality as Exemplified by Diana Wynne Jones’. The current tentative title of her PhD thesis is ‘Preconceived Notions of Authorship’ and aims to study the critical reception of female authors in the fields of science fiction and dystopia.

Anna Royal received her MA from McGill University, where she specialised in postcolonial and gender theory in nineteenth-century Victorian literature. Other recent publications include ‘Wax Dolls: Shaping a New Identity in Mary Elizabeth Braddon’s Lady Audley’s Secret’ in Nineteenth-Century Gender Studies.

Umme Salma is teaching English in Department of English Language and Literature (ELL), International Islamic University Chittagong, Bangladesh. Her research interest lies in lies in Postcolonial World Literature and postcolonial theory, Contemporary and Indian fictions in English, nationalism and transcultural identity.

Michael X. Savvas is a lecturer in the Transition Office at Flinders University. As Co-ordinator of the Foundation Studies Program at Mobilong Prison, Michael has been in prison several times and no-one ever objects when he leaves … not a single person.

Asma Sayed holds a PhD in Comparative Literature from the University of Alberta, Canada. Her interdisciplinary research focuses on Canadian literature (especially on South Asian diaspora literature in Canada) in the context of global multiculturalism. She is the editor of M.G. Vassanji: Essays on His Works (2014) and Writing Diaspora: Transnational Memories, Identities and Cultures (2014).

Kay Schaffer is an Adjunct Professor in Gender Studies and Social Analysis, School of Social Studies at the University of Adelaide. She is the author of several books including: Decolonizing the Landscape: Australian Indigenous Knowledges (ed. with Beate Neumeier, Rodopi, 2014), Women Writers in Postsocialist China (with Xianlin Song, Routledge, 2013) and Human Rights and Narrated Lives: The Ethics of Recognition (with Sidonie Smith, Palgrave, 2004).

Sunil Sharma, a Mumbai-based college principal, is also a widely-published bilingual Indian critic, poet, literary interviewer, editor, translator, essayist and fiction writer. His six short stories and the novel Minotaur were recently set for undergraduate classes in Post-colonial Studies, Clayton University, Georgia, USA. In 2012 he won the UK-based Destiny Poets’ inaugural poet of the year award.

Dmitry Shlapentokh was born in the USSR and has been resident of the USA since 1979. He teaches history in Indiana University, South Bend. He is the author of several books and many articles.
Ian C. Smith is a past contributor to Transnational Literature. His seventh book, wonder sadness madness joy, will be published by Ginninderra in 2014.

Ruth Starke is a reviewer and writer who holds Academic Status in the Department of a English and Creative Writing at Flinders University where she is researching a biography of the late Don Dunstan.

Kathleen Steele, a Creative PhD candidate with a focus on Australian Literature at Macquarie University, has academic and creative work published in various journals and online, including Australian Book Review, Australian ejournal of Theology, Colloquy, Transnational Literature, and Antipodes.

Emily Sutherland is deputy editor of Transnational Literature. She is the author of four novels and five plays, and is co-editor of Integrity and Historical Research. Since completing her PhD at Flinders University, South Australia, she has facilitated writing classes and is now presenter of Kaleidoscope, an arts magazine program broadcast weekly on Radio 5mbs.

Reg Taylor is a PhD student at Adelaide University. As part of his thesis he is writing a novel featuring some of the survivors of the New Australia experiment in Paraguay in the 1890s.

Kenneth Usongo holds a PhD in Comparative literature from the University of Denver, as well as a doctorate in English literary studies from the University of Yaoundé 1. He has published two dozen refereed essays in English, Postcolonial, and American literatures as book chapters and in journals such as Transnational Literature, Matatu, Alizés, Journal of African Literature and Culture. Dr Usongo is an Advisory Board member of Transnational Literature.

Lynette Washington is a short story writer and PhD candidate in the English and Creative Writing program at the University of Adelaide, where she also teaches. Her stories have been published by SWAMP Writing, Tincture Journal and Spineless Wonders. In 2014 Lynette is editing an anthology of stories by University of Adelaide Creative Writing postgrads. You can follow her on Twitter (@LynneTashi), Facebook (Lynette Washington – Author) or on her blog http://lynettewashington.wordpress.com/

Christine Williams has published four biographical works, including a biography of novelist Christina Stead. She is now the director of Sydney School of Arts & Humanities, which publishes the work of new and developing writers and runs classes in memoir, poetry and creative writing: www.ssoa.com.au/

Heather H. Yeung works in poetry, poetics, and cultural theory. She is postdoctoral research assistant on the AHRC Memory Network (University of Roehampton, London) and has just completed a monograph on voice and space in contemporary poetry.