Volume 8, no. 1, November 2015

Complete poetry one file for ease of downloading and printing

<table> <thead>
<tr>
<th>Author</th>
<th>Title</th>
</tr> </thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Stuart Barnes</td>
<td>из России</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alzo David-West</td>
<td>Machine Gun Women, or They Mist Black Trees in Wet Walking</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Natasha Garrett</td>
<td>Second Language</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ian Gibbins</td>
<td>A Captain Cook</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mike Hopkins</td>
<td>Stone</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jennifer Liston</td>
<td>One Last Poem</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Billy Marshall Stoneking</td>
<td>Shards of Colour</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mark O'Flynn</td>
<td>Sound Track</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chandramohan S</td>
<td>Elegy for the Slain Bloggers</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Michele Seminara</td>
<td>One Day in the Life of</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
из России

Alitalia: hazy, like Nan & Pop’s … Rome: the taxis! the cats! … Moscow’s gilt mocks, McDonald’s’, too: one goddamn Big Mac ‘meal’ = one month’s wage! … Fifty dead presidents for genuine black market sailor shirt: itch -y, made from wool … Gypsies nearly whoosh our bus in Pushkin … Saint Petersburg → Karelia train star-red, ash-blond scouts snooze like speechless speech marks … Lake Ladoga: icebox; MOSQUITOES; white nights bewilder Siberian cedars … Kath & I boomerang to de-mountables: ‘Il y a un beau garçon là-bas’: Ilya’s cheeks borscht-pink … T’s headphones’ Cure: ‘through the dark your eyes shine bright & burn like fire burn like fire in Cairo’ … I ♥ zh … Homesick for Hobart … с любовью

Stuart Barnes

*note: ‘из России с любовью’ is Russian for ‘From Russia with love’, ‘Il y a un beau garçon là-bas’ is French for ‘There’s a handsome boy over there’ Machine Gun Women,
or They Mist Black Trees in Wet Walking

Black—
black outline of the horizon
a black silhouette of trees
against a watercolor red,
violet,
milky,
pink sky
with a few stars scattered sparsely about a thick mist.
One,
two,
three,
four stars
arching overhead.
Damp and wet trees,
water droplets from the leaves.

The occasional sound of machine guns blaring somewhere in the distance
the sound of an airplane moaning overhead
....
Sixty seconds.
Walking
creaking steps crushing the stones
passing by dead leaves on thin stalks, hanging damp and wet.
A crunch and the shadow and the mist
light
a stillness and a silence
a bunch
of wet leaves.
Water dropping.
A general silence.
No one is there.
The four of them
        walking quietly
        worriedly.
The sounds of other people who are not there.
A certain fearsomeness about circumstance trailed by their own shadows
under a moonless night
where the light is only the deep,
red,
violet firmament over the horizon of black,
naked branches
and trees
stretching somewhere.

They’re walking
        and trudging.
The mist is thick,
and they’re hungry.
And pain
pulling inside
their stomachs
like tearing,
like twisting.

Cold damp air hitting their faces
        turning around,
        hearing waterdrops on stones.
Turning around
and again that moaning sound in the sky
and a barrage somewhere they cannot see a mountain
nothing visible
beyond that thick mist.

And they walk and walk.
        Their hands are cold.
        Their feet are cold.
        And their stomachs are empty.
        They’re hungry and tired and weak,
and they see a tree.
They come to what seems like a path.
   More blotches,
   black trees
   and mist
   a vista of thick,
   suffusing mist
   and black trees.

Her nose is leaking and itching,
   and the fatigue straining their bodies.
   And the heart—
   their heart
   aching
   as if being compressed
   uncomfortably.
   The pain.
   No food.
   A hunger pain
   in her heart
   pulling,
   stretching
   an echoing crunch
   walking on the wet stones and dead leaves
   in the dark
   in their shadows.
   Tired.

February fourteen,
   nineteen fifty three.

Alzo David-West
Second Language

I am a tenant
in this glorious palace,
running through rooms and hallways
someone else has decorated,
sleeping in a bed
as if it’s my own,
my dusty boots lying on the floor.

I try to earn my keep
so I spruce up a bit,
only take small sips
from the wine in the cellar
--or did I buy it?
I can't remember
what's mine and
what I have found here.

I feel quite welcome
but I keep
a suitcase ready,
just in case.
Once in a while,
I nail one of my own portraits
On a burnished wall.

Natasha Garrett
A Captain Cook

Here again, not well, likely a turnspit, jiggered, seafowl aswoon, unfeathered on deck mahogany,
ocean smooth and tumultuous and heaving
all bilious, curmudgeonly, all at a time.

Underneath, fore, malodorous leviathan, rotten kraken stink;
aft, cod slime coating us double-breasted in doubloons.
Wheedle to side, we yearn dissolution, hard swizzle,
a canter from the mizzen mast.

So swing us a reel, old mate, breach your musket lead.
Till the sun breaks shackles, tasks late azimuth,
we’ll be run though midships with stringy bark,
shaggy punch, brindled spiny fig.

Elsewise, we hide mongst mouldering caulk,
wait dangle-tailed for planetary casts on cruise tide,
when glacial icefloes volcano our breath space,
pilfer our saddle-darned carpet bags.

Whose trajectory then scour my sleep, counterbreaks,
smites caterwaulls across my log lines?
What worriment forths mildewed landsend,
unwashable bloodclot, blind apostrophe?

Along the whiles, powder my silk, sash my periwig;
stow flannel and serge, reft fishbone and lice.
Stay me my phlegm, boil this black ink regalia.
Curdlesome, I hove, penny pick my ultimatum.

Ian Gibbins

Ian Gibbins, 'A Captain Cook'.
Transnational Literature Vol. 8 no. 1, November 2015.
Stone:

    stretched
from fell to rigg
from crag to beck

grey patched
lichen plumed
pocked and pitted

    pile on pile
pressed by cow pelt
brushed by sheep shank

the land's flanks
stitched with drystone ribs

Mike Hopkins
One Last Poem

I was going to write one last poem
but nothing came out,
only lightning & red sand
& a campfire that speaks
at least fifteen Aboriginal dialects
as it stirs the embers with a stick.
Even a whitefella can understand
two or three sentences
if he's prepared to press
his ear to the flames.
The Pintupi have forgotten more than I’ll ever know about the Land –
its ways & names.
Too much to remember,
other than the warning:
don't eat kuka in the rain.
“Proper cheeky bugger, lightning.”

Today a friend told me,
"everything's a metaphor for something else."
But what I don't understand is:
why, when I wanted to describe you, was the only metaphor that came to mind
the sound of wind blowing in from the desert?

Billy Marshall Stoneking

* “kuka” - meat
Shards of Colour

How brown, the sound of a galley’s oars
when black is the sound of water.
See how the green of an ancient grudge dares to ignite the red of a temper that flares, lighting the white sound of a man’s skull, cracked.

Jennifer Liston
Dancing like the dead
the leaves jump beneath the gurlet
blows of hailstones like Warren Beatty and Faye Dunaway at the end of Bonnie & Clyde.
It might be stretching a point, and yet,
despite the thunder, the sky is still blue.

The machine-gunned villagers
in the black and white newsreel are the silent witnesses now opposed to the sun, the leaves’ stains outlined on the path steaming like the aftermath of fire.
Forthright in its silence

the road smokes like a tea break.
The survivors peek from beneath the bodies of their fellows, playing possum until, the tapping on the roof
subsiding, the sun revives
and the mood music changes.

Mark O'Flynn
Elegy for the Slain Bloggers

After the death of the writer or the cartoonist or the blogger

A bonfire is lit using

The fire kindled from the funeral pyre

Like the continued wriggle of the severed tail of a lizard

Creating a deceptive sense of a pulsating prolonged resistance

This week is the 70th anniversary of the Hiroshima bombings.

Chandramohan S
One Day in the Life of

There were six, all girls,

Leningrad students,

spread on their little table; mackintoshes swinging

posh suitcases life

All clear for them. We talked and drank

They asked me what I was. I told the truth. "I'm special girls, heading straight for death".

They gasped and moaned

And covered me

all the way to Novosibirsk.

*

at night, through the back garden

my brother with me.

Nothing to give him nothing for myself. In Frunze some road workers

take my little brother

Teach him how to live

through

even this

Michele Seminara

* an erasure poem sourced from two paragraphs of One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich, by Alexander Solzhenitsyn

Michele Seminara. 'One Day in the Life of'. Transnational Literature Vol. 8 no. 1, November 2015.