Australian Archaeology

Full Citation Details:
These are papers from Section 25A of the 49th Congress of the Australasian Association for the Advancement of Science, held in Auckland, New Zealand, January 1979.

M.B. Schiffer introduces the volume with an overview of archaeological resource management in the United States. Other groups of papers cover site registers and site surveying in Australia, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea and the Solomon Islands; and site management in Australia and New Zealand. Papers by Josephine Flood (Australian Heritage Commission) on tourism and archaeological sites, K.A. Sutcliffe on Queensland’s archaeological services, and John Coster on the New Zealand Forest Service’s site surveying and management program will be of interest to a wide readership.

A stimulating discussion chaired by D.J. Mulvaney covers the confidentiality of site records, and the prospects for archaeological research in resource management organisations.
NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Manuscripts should be typed, double-spaced, leaving reasonably wide margins. Some clear photographs and simple line drawings will be accepted if submitted at final size to fit within A4 format, on bond or other good quality paper. Deadlines for receipt of copy are 30 April and 31 October.

Contributions covering a wide range of archaeological interests are sought, but some special categories are:

Forthcoming fieldwork
This is designed to put researchers planning fieldwork in touch with people who may be able to render assistance on an excavation, or who would like to visit a site for the sake of interest. Fieldworkers are asked to send in full details of their project, including location, dates, research aims and an indication as to whether visits to the site by other members are practical.

Employment opportunities
Situations vacant and wanted will be listed.

Research reports
Summaries of research in various fields by correspondents.

Bibliography
A list of current publications from departments or institutions.

Notes and comments
A section for general discussion and expression of opinion.
